DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

a. Claims 1-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kanai (U.S. Patent 5,824,921) in view of Baldwin et al. (U.S. Patent 5,042,265).

Kanai discloses a method and a test system for testing plurality of heat pump having array of testing station, plurality of data acquisition lines, plurality of control lines, a control device, control mean receives test data through the data acquisition lines and transmit control data (col. 1-2, lines 35-59, fig. 1-5), test on a compressor, evaporator (col. 2, lines 14-20), use of temperature sensor (col. 11, lines 35-45), automated testing protocol running on a pass/fail criteria computer system, report of the results (fig. 1, 6, 9, 12), a external valve for the testing of the unit (col. 20, lines 16-25).

Kanai does not disclose a plurality of heating element attachment on the heat pumps to change the temperature.

Baldwin disclose such application (col. 4-5, lines 62-15) having a zone temperature control (cooling or heating) for the system controller, in order to have a sophisticated testing station to improve the heating, ventilating and air conditioning system testing (col. 1, lines 5-9, col. 2, lines 1-4).

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to modify Kanai to have the heating element attachment on the heat pumps to change the temperature taught by Baldwin in to have a sophisticated testing station to improve the heating, ventilating and air conditioning system testing.

Response to Arguments

2. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-20 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection. However, applicant's arguments filed 11/4/2002 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

A. Applicant argue that Kanai fail to teach a heating elements attached to the components of the heat pump to change the temperature during testing. Kanai talk about how the environment factor (changing temperature) affects the testing in col. 10, lines 1-11, one of the ordinary in the art at the time the invention was made know that means cooling and heating on the environment can affect the testing system, therefore by adding a heater to raise the temperature or a cooler to lower the temperature during testing is inherently anticipated by Kanai and not patentable over the prior art.

B. Applicant also argue that Kanai fail to teach the 'plurality of control lines connected to the heat pump for testing. Fig. 6 shows multiple systems testing multiple test stations, and Kanai talk about control test line capable connected to the heat pump for testing (col. 1, lines 39-42).

Conclusion

Applicant's amendment necessitated the new ground(s) of rejection presented in this Office action. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. See MPEP § 706.07(a). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the date of this final action.
